

Weddings, Radiation and Conferences

Actually ---there was just one wedding :) Our one and only granddaughter, Briana Arnold, became Mrs Matt Hamb a little over a week ago. Grandpa proudly tied the knot and we all shed some tears as she walked down the aisle. Paul waited to start the radiation treatments until last Monday --- so he's had five days --- today's the sixth and he's half way through! We're SO thankful that the side effects have been minimal --- but they say they're accumulate so we know he'll be "feeling things" more as the days go by. They say he'll probably lose his side burn and beard on the right side of his face --- less to shave:)

This is all mixed in with our NTM Enrichment conference that started last night ---and we hope to take in as much as we can. Two weeks ago I wouldn't have been able to go but the neck spasm that grabbed me after my last pain shot has almost completed passed. (Thank you Lord!) Oral surgery for a very long battle with gum infection has my face all black and blue --- but I tell people that I won :) So ---other than that --- we're doing great :) God's grace is wonderfully sufficient ---as we walk moment by moment with Him!!! Thank you SO much for your prayers and financial support!
